My name is Jill William . I love to create and design documents and websites and write original code. I love the coding community and want to be a part of it in any way I can.

The strengths that I have that I can contribute to your company are:

The ability to develop procedures that are successful in maintaining a systematic methodology, even in the midst of complex inter-related tasks

Very high degree of quality-control awareness

Highly aware of the dangers of making mistakes through hasty decisions

Most effective in a work culture where conflicts are kept to a minimum

Others seek me out to answer complex questions because I either know the answers or where to find them

Excellent communication skills (orally, written, and presentation)

Enjoy team-centered approaches to ensuring quality in product development

On complex assignments, I will show the ability to handle both the people-side and the detail-side of a project with equal skill and confidence.

Desire to be seen as the one who has the ability to take the seed of an idea and develop it into a successful solution

Motivated with high optimism and a strong drive to succeed on projects and assignments

Possess the ability to contribute to a pleasant and efficient working environment due to the attention I pay to people and quality-control

Tend to be considerate of others on the team and persuades in an assertive-manner without being demanding

Bring an appropriate amount of logic and emotion when communicating and motivating others on my team

Job related decisions are made by gathering the facts and considering the needs of people involved

(As reported by the DISC© Personality Profile; I am a "C" personality with the "S" category as a runner-up.)

My hobbies include spending time with my family, creating websites, eating too much junk food, golfing, painting with oils on canvas, photography, excessive coffee drinking, woodworking projects using my scroll saw, designing floor-plans for houses, drawing in general, and yearly family vacations at the Oregon Coast and camping and fishing in Eastern each summer. And coding. It is so addicting!!

I hope you will consider me for any open position you may have. I am a very quick learner and can teach myself how to do things with little assistance from others. I am a highly-knowledgeable person, and having managed several businesses, I see my future in front-end web development, with an end goal of being a Full-Stack Developer.

I see the larger scope of web development from a business owner's realistic revenue-generating perspective. I would be an employee that will bring a positive impact to your business and assist in raising the bottom-line.

Thank you for your consideration and I hope to hear from you soon,
Jill Williams
